LITERA CLUB

Newsletter

Celebrating the Power of Literature, Art, & Innovation

Director's Desk

---

Dear Students,

I would like to begin by congratulating the students who have taken the initiative to start the Litera Club and bring out this newsletter. It is encouraging to see students create a platform where thoughts, feelings, and ideas can be expressed freely. Initiatives like these allow students to move beyond routine academic activities and explore the creative and reflective side of their personalities. In today's world, the ability to express oneself clearly and thoughtfully is an essential skill.

College life offers many opportunities for learning and growth, both within and beyond the classroom. At the same time, students today face several distractions that can easily affect their focus. What truly makes a difference is having a clear goal and the dedication to work towards it. Every individual has the same amount of time available, but the way we choose to use that time determines our progress. Therefore, it is important for students to identify their interests, choose the path they wish to follow, and make the best use of the opportunities available to them.

While academic learning helps build knowledge and technical competence, personal qualities such as confidence, communication, and clarity of thought are equally important. The way a person writes, speaks, and presents ideas often shapes how others perceive their abilities. These skills develop gradually through practice and active participation. Whenever there is an opportunity to volunteer, share ideas, or take part in activities, students should step forward and make use of it. Each such experience contributes to personal growth and helps build confidence over time.

In this regard, the Litera Club plays an important role in encouraging creativity and expression among students. It provides a meaningful platform where students can share their ideas, thoughts, and talents through writing and discussions. A newsletter like this also allows students to express deeper reflections and experiences through various forms such as prose, poetry, book reviews, and other creative contributions.

Before I conclude, I would like to leave you with a simple thought: Believe in yourself. Confidence is one of the strongest companions in life. Challenges are a natural part of every journey, but when situations become difficult, strengthen your determination and continue moving forward.

I commend the efforts of the Litera Club and the editorial team in bringing out this newsletter. May this initiative continue to inspire creativity, confidence, and meaningful expression among students.

With best wishes,

Dr. Jandhyala N. Murthy

Director

Gokaraju Rangaraju Institute of Engineering and Technology (GRIET), Hyderabad

Dear Students,

It is my pleasure to address you through The Litera Chronicles, the newsletter of the Literature Club, Litera. As you progress in your academic journey, I encourage you to recognise that time is one of our most valuable resources. When we use it with intention and approach each moment with sincerity, meaningful progress naturally follows.

Building on this understanding, it becomes clear that clarity of purpose and consistent effort are essential at this stage of your development. Remain committed to the path you have chosen, for disciplined learning builds confidence, and that confidence helps you transform challenges into opportunities. Throughout this process, trust the system, trust your teachers, and trust in the learning experience that shapes your growth.

While academic commitment remains central, your college experience is enriched even further by the wide range of activities, clubs, and student-led initiatives that bring vibrancy to campus life. In this regard, I commend Litera for creating a space where creativity, expression, and thoughtful dialogue can flourish. Participation in such platforms nurtures organisational and leadership abilities, while even the simplest event teaches coordination, communication, and responsibility. These skills remain valuable long after graduation.

Alongside academic engagement and extracurricular involvement, the spirit of service plays an equally important role in shaping your character. Whether extended to classmates, juniors, or the broader community, acts of service cultivate empathy, compassion, and a sense of collective belonging. These qualities contribute significantly to building a positive and supportive academic environment for all.

As we embrace a new academic year, it is important to integrate all these aspects—academic discipline, active participation, and service—into your personal growth. I encourage every student to strive for holistic development: strong in character, confident in ability, disciplined in conduct, and open to both technological progress and artistic expression. Swami Vivekananda's words, "Strength is life. Weakness is death," serve as a reminder to remain steadfast, focused, and determined in all your endeavours.

I extend my appreciation to the members of Litera and the editorial team of The Litera Chronicles for their dedication in preparing this newsletter. May the pages that follow reflect creativity, purpose, and the collective spirit of our college community.

With best wishes,

Dr. Akundi Sai Hanuman

It gives me immense pleasure to commend the efforts of the Litera Club in bringing out this newsletter. The publication reflects the creativity, enthusiasm, and dedication of our students, who have worked tirelessly to showcase their literary talents.

Creativity & Innovation: The articles, poems, and stories highlight not only the imagination of our students but also their ability to engage with contemporary issues in thoughtful ways.

Teamwork & Collaboration: The newsletter is a testament to the collaborative spirit of the club members, who have come together to produce a vibrant and meaningful publication.

Skill Development: Initiatives like this help students sharpen their writing, editing, and organizational skills, which will serve them well in both academic and professional spheres.

I encourage all students to actively participate in such platforms, as they provide opportunities to express ideas, nurture creativity, and build confidence.

I congratulate the editorial team and all contributors for their commendable work. May the Litera Club continue to inspire and enrich our campus with many more such initiatives.

With best wishes,

Dr. Padmalaya Nayak

It is encouraging to see initiatives like the Litera Club creating opportunities for students to grow beyond academics. Clubs such as these play an important role in helping students develop essential skills, especially communication and self-expression.

In today's competitive environment, the ability to communicate ideas clearly and work effectively with others is just as important as academic knowledge. Students who build strong communication and interpersonal skills are better prepared to succeed in their future careers.

Confidence is another key element in a student's development. Many students hesitate to speak in front of others due to stage fear or uncertainty. However, it is important to remember that learning is a gradual process, and confidence grows when students actively participate and practice expressing their ideas.

The Litera Club provides an excellent platform for students to enhance their creativity and overcome hesitation. Activities such as debates, discussions, and literary engagements help students improve their communication abilities and present their thoughts with clarity.

I encourage all students to take advantage of such platforms and actively participate in these initiatives. With continuous effort and enthusiasm, they can strengthen their confidence and develop valuable skills that will benefit them in the future.

Event : LITERA Orientation Event

Date: 19 September 2025

Subject: Summary Report of Club Event

1. Executive Summary

The LITERA Orientation Event marked the official launch of the club for the academic year and successfully created enthusiasm and a sense of belonging among students. The event was graced by Dr. Hanumanth Rao, Principal, GLEC, along with Dr. Padmalaya Nayak, HoD–CSE and Dr. Kishore Babu, HoD–H&S, whose addresses motivated students to actively support the club's vision.

The programme clearly introduced LITERA's mission, goals and values. The well-organized structure helped students understand the club's purpose and their potential role in future activities, making the orientation both informative and engaging.

2. Flow of Events & Key Moments

A. President's Address

The event began with a motivating speech by the Club President, highlighting creativity, collaboration and active participation. The address set a clear vision and a positive tone for the year ahead.

B. Official Poster Unveiling

The unveiling of the official LITERA poster/banner was a major highlight. The moment received enthusiastic applause and symbolized the formal beginning of the club's activities.

C. Vice President's Presentation

The Vice President presented the club's goals, upcoming activities and member expectations. The session provided a clear roadmap for student involvement and future initiatives.

3. Participant Feedback

Student feedback reflected high levels of enthusiasm and appreciation. Many attendees praised the energetic atmosphere and engaging flow of the programme. One participant noted that the President's address was highly motivating, while another highlighted the clarity and purpose of the Vice President's presentation, which helped them understand their role in the club.

Several students also appreciated the passion and leadership displayed by the organizing team, stating that the event strengthened their interest in joining LITERA. Overall, the feedback indicated that the orientation successfully inspired, informed and energized the participants.

4. Conclusion

The LITERA Orientation Event proved to be a successful and promising start to the club's activities for the academic year. It effectively communicated the club's purpose, encouraged student involvement and created a positive and motivating environment. The event established a strong foundation for upcoming initiatives and set an enthusiastic momentum for LITERA's journey throughout the year.

Event : SEEKH initiative by Litera Club

Date: 30 October, 2025

1. Executive Summary

The Litera Club participated in the SEEKH initiative on October 30, 2025, by setting up an activity zone that provided students a refreshing break from academics. The club organized three stalls with engaging activities to encourage creativity and participation. The zone attracted continuous participation throughout the day and contributed to the lively atmosphere of the event, making the club's involvement a success.

2. Introduction

2.1 About SEEKH

SEEKH is a campus initiative that promotes innovation, practical thinking and collaborative learning through hands-on, experiential activities and also linking theory with real-world application.

2.2 Litera Club's Role

The Litera Club contributed by creating a relaxed, creative space where students could unwind, interact and engage informally. This participation enhanced the student experience while strengthening the club's campus presence and visibility.

3. Activity Zone Overview

The activity zone curated by the Litera Club featured nine thoughtfully selected activities that blended recreation, skill-building and literary elements. Spread across three well-organised stalls, the setup included visually appealing posters, banners and thematic decorations that drew the attention of passersby. Small prizes were offered to winners, which contributed to the excitement and encouraged students to try multiple activities. Throughout the event, the activity zone attracted continuous participation with students collaborating, discussing strategies and revisiting their favourite games. The stalls became a lively space that complemented the academic atmosphere with a refreshing energy.

4. Student Engagement and Feedback

Students responded enthusiastically to the activities, appreciating their variety and creativity. Games like Word Hunt, Tangram and Quote Translator were especially popular for being both challenging and enjoyable. The friendly volunteers created a welcoming environment that encouraged participation. Consistent engagement throughout the day reflected the success of the initiative with students returning with friends, sharing experiences and enjoying collaborative yet light-hearted competition that added both social and educational value.

5. Impact and Outcomes

The SEEKH initiative increased the Litera Club's visibility on campus, with many students showing interest in its upcoming activities. The activity zone highlighted the club's creative identity and left a positive impression on participants. The event organisers also acknowledged the club's contribution, recognising the activity zone for adding a creative and student-friendly element to SEEKH.

6. Team Performance

The volunteers who managed the activity zone displayed commendable teamwork and dedication. Their consistent involvement, from setting up the stalls to assisting participants throughout the event, played a crucial role in ensuring smooth operations. Their ability to maintain a welcoming environment and handle the ongoing student flow contributed significantly to the overall success of the Litera Club's participation in SEEKH.

Event : Lexicon Clash (Debate Event)

Date: 15th November 2025

INTER-DEPARTMENTAL DEBATE COMPETITION 2025

1. Overview of the Event

The Inter-Departmental Debate Competition 2025, organized by The Literature Club – Lit'era on 15 November 2025, brought together students from various departments for an engaging exchange of ideas. The event stood out for its disciplined execution, strong participation and intellectually stimulating discussions. The programme opened with motivating remarks by Dr. Deepa and Dr. Kasi Ram, emphasizing critical thinking and constructive dialogue. With 24 teams participating and smooth coordination by volunteers, the event reflected Lit'era's commitment to promoting academic excellence and communication skills.

2. Purpose and Vision

The competition aimed to strengthen students' public speaking, critical thinking and argumentation abilities. It encouraged participants to present ideas confidently, analyze diverse viewpoints and engage in respectful debate. Through this initiative, Lit'era sought to promote inter-departmental interaction, build confidence and nurture leadership qualities, aligning with the club's broader vision of intellectual growth and academic engagement.

3. Event Progression

The event began with a brief welcome address, followed by preliminary rounds conducted in two parallel sessions. After evaluation, eight teams advanced to the final round. Final-round debates addressed topics such as failure as a teacher, freedom versus irresponsibility, the temperament of Gen-Z and ethical issues surrounding genetically engineered babies. The judging panel—Dr. Deepa, Dr. Sailaja, and Dr. Kasi Ram—offered constructive feedback. The programme concluded with the Principal's address and prize distribution.

4. Results of the Competition

The winners were selected based on content quality, clarity, rebuttal skills, and teamwork.

Winner: Mogili Santosh (CSE-C), Annika Jha (CSE-C), Pendyala Sarala Devi (CSE-C)

1st Runner-up: Swayam (CSE-B), Anurag (CSE-B), Manaswini (CSE-E)

2nd Runner-up: Ratan (CSE-B), Yashasvi Reddy (CSE-B), Sushanth (CSE-B)

Judges appreciated the participants' preparation and encouraged continued skill development.

5. Participant & Audience Feedback

Participants and faculty responded positively to the event's organization, fairness and topic selection. Students found the judges' feedback helpful, while audience members praised the professional atmosphere, discipline and smooth flow of the sessions. Suggestions received will help refine future events.

6. Conclusion

The Inter-Departmental Debate Competition 2025 provided a meaningful platform for students to express ideas, challenge perspectives and grow through structured discussion. The event reinforced Lit'era's mission of fostering intellectual confidence and collaboration, setting a strong foundation for future academic initiatives.

Title: The Chapter I'm In

Most people get their quirks from about age 19 to age 21; some can bend light, while others can talk to animals. My quirk arrived on my 20th birthday - "A Book" - A sleek, brown diary with my name embossed in gold. Inside it said,

"This book writes time."

There was a rule scribbled faintly on the last page—almost like a warning:

"Each time you travel, your age in the present increases by the total number of years you move through."

For instance, traveling 10 years into the past and then returning causes an increase of 20 years in present age.

I hated my present life. Everything felt like, it was falling apart—people, plans, peace. So, without hesitation, I wrote, "Take me 7 years into the past."

Suddenly, I was 13 again—back in the warmth of my childhood home. I changed things. I stood up, when I used to stay silent. I hugged the ones I lost. I tried to make it better.

But, reliving every heartbreak and sadness only reopened wounds, I thought I'd buried. And when I finally returned... I was 14 years older than, I should've been.

Still, the present felt unfamiliar. Heavy. So, I tried the future.

"Take me 10 years ahead."

It was bright, polished, and utterly cold. The people I loved, were distant or simply gone. My future self had everything I thought, I wanted—success, stability, even recognition—but none of it felt like me.

The small choices I avoided, the time I didn't value—it all added up to a life that looked perfect... but felt empty.

Everyone had changed. Or maybe I had.

For the first time, I wanted now. Not the past. Not the future.

So, I returned to the present—aged, tired, but awake. I couldn't undo the years I traded, but I could still write new pages.

And maybe, just maybe... the real quirk wasn't the book.

It was learning to live in the chapter I was in.

Selective Memory Poem

We carry lanterns through the years,
lit by laughter, warmed by cheers.
The shadows fade, the storms grow thin,
only sunlight lingers in.

The broken nights, the silent cries,
slip quietly from our mind's disguise.
Yet birthdays, songs, and gentle hands,
remain like shells upon the sands.

Perhaps it's mercy, perhaps it's art,
this gentle editing of the heart.
For life is stitched with joy and ache,
but memory chooses what to take.

So when we look behind the door,
we see the gardens, not the war.
And in the mirror of the past,
the brightest colors always last.

I Am the War and the Warmth

There is a silence in me
sharp like shattered glass,
hidden in the hollows of my chest,
stacked in corners I swore no one would ever find.
I don't scream when I hate myself —
I whisper.
I slip daggers beneath my tongue,
I poison my tea with doubt.
I smile while I bleed inside,
avert my eyes from mirrors
that know too much.
But love —
oh, she crashes in like thunder,
wild and shameless.
She drips rainwater on my clean floors,
tracks her muddy footprints
straight across my shame.
She calls me holy.
She calls me worth it.
She stitches affirmations
into the skin I'm still trying to love.
I am the girl who bruises her own soul with thoughts too vicious for enemies, who slices herself open in secret,
then binds the wounds
with poems, with playlists,
with fragile promises to be softer tomorrow.
I have never needed a voice —
it is fluent in silence,
fluent in shadows.
But love —
love kicks down locked doors,
love raises her voice in my ribcage,
calls me beautiful,

Ch Sudhiksha – 2nd year

SOFT FIRE

Love that doesn't sway but stays
The kind that grows you — not erases you
Love that's there — not in selfies, not in captions, just in life
The kind that burns like a soft fire in a cold world
Love that needs no words — only right actions
The kind that sings a lullaby by the end of the day

Blossom Of Stories

The path to the stop was divided into two

One lively and one new

Believing the new path , I embark

I was walking on luna free of dark

The journey on this path is an endeavor

Pushing through my guts whenever

I hear voices that try to forgive

As I realize this road has more to give

I see people as gentle as a cloud

Hoping to see what happens tomorrow

Crossing paths was clear and loud

Yet the inner child whispered , "wait till tomorrow"

They say there's no limit to the sky

Yet there are walls to conquer

'You can do it too' is the fuel to fly

Only when you know to trust your people

THE VOICE OF ME

Students who protest for their rights are treated worse than criminals, and the media is interested in debating BABA's and Samosas. News channels that run hours long stories and articles on government freebies and portray it as if it is taken from the pockets of an individual, don't even show a single scrolling about Manipur.

Dr. A. P. J. Abdul Kalam had mentioned that the strength of this country is its large youth, and the weakness is when it doesn't have a proper vision. But I'm afraid that the youth of my country is busy in fighting for some politicians and parties whom their parents and grandparents support, or due to social media trance, instead of questioning them. They are busy debating movie collections and so-called records of some film stars and stats of athletes, instead of drawing inspiration from them.

Politicians and corporates who commit extortions, scams, rapes and murders roam freely and out of the blue, even if they get jailed, they are given VIP treatment. Instead of finding the root cause of the problem and making the politicians accountable, people just back them. We highlight milestones of players, trophies of teams, and even collections and teasers of movies on our social media accounts. But when it is time for social unity to fight against a situation, we just keep silent, just by telling ourselves, "My word will not make any difference". But let me remind you my friend, your word itself is the DIFFERENCE!! If the right ones stay silent, only the incapables will take control. This is our country, and we must take responsibility on our shoulders and act as necessary.

Only PEOPLE can make a nation GREAT!!!

YOU JUST MADE MY DAY

A Short Story

She was the bright girl of her village, topping every exam—until she moved to the city and met him, the boy who was always one rank above her. He didn't act like a rival. He brought her lunch when she skipped meals, bought her favorite snacks, and quietly stayed beside her during study hours. She thought he liked her.

But when she asked, he smiled sadly.
"Why would I like you? We're just friends."

Rumors spread, people mocked her, and anger pushed her away from him. He never defended himself. He only said:

"Next spring will be my last spring here."

She never believed him.

Years later, she found out he had died young—by suicide. The news crushed her. She visited his mother, tasted the cookies he loved, and realized how little she had understood him.

Under a cherry blossom tree, she caught a falling petal and wished to know his truth. Suddenly, she saw the past again—his forced smiles, his loneliness, his silent pain. And she finally understood:

He wasn't helping her because she needed him...

He helped her because he needed someone.

Conclusion

I chose this story because it shows how easily we can hurt people without realizing it. Words said in anger, or influenced by others, can wound someone deeply—especially sensitive hearts. And once time passes, we cannot always fix what breaks.

It also reminds us not to live in regret about the past. Instead, we should be present, be kind, and shape a better future with awareness and compassion.

Pranavi - 1st year

A Fresh Start

A whisper stirs the morning air,
A promise wrapped in sun's soft glare.
The past, now pages turned with grace.
The future awaits, a wide new space.

No chains of fear, no weight of doubt,
Just hope within and reaching out.
Each step unmarked, a chance to grow,
To plant new seeds and let like flow.

The storms have passed, the skies are clear,
Your heart, once hushed, now learns to hear.
New dreams arise, bold, undefined-
A blank page held in steady mind.

So breath it in, this dawning light,
Let courage be your guiding sight.
For every end births something new,
A fresh start waits inside of you!

Title: The Weight of Packed Bags

I was 14 when someone asked me, "What do you want to do in your life?"

My eyes filled with tears because, like always, I had no answer.

I grew up around people who reminded me I wasn't enough, yet somehow I was also pampered younger daughter, a weird mix of criticism and comfort I had. I was 16 when I moved to new city with three bags full of clothes and a hope that I would get into a good college, but things don't always work out the way we want. That's just life. I ended up in a college which wasn't even on my list, but honestly? It gave me experiences I didn't know I needed.

I still remember the confusion I felt before joining. And then my very Indian Muslim dad told me something that became my forever reminder: "Mil gaya toh accha, nahi mila toh aur bhi accha.", which means "If you get it, that's good. If you don't, that's even better." Somehow, that line made everything less scary. When I finally left for college, it was the same three bags again.

Packed with clothes, snacks, and of course, the pickle which was made by my lovely mom. And since then, I've never really unpacked them, as if my life was paused inside them. Every time I open those bags to take something out, they remind me: This isn't my home. And the place I used to call home doesn't feel like home anymore. It's funny how we live our lives like those three packed bags, trying to fit into the wrong groups, wrong internships, wrong relationships, and never realizing that the bags weren't the burden. We are the ones who carry it. We are meant to live, not just survive. I just hope one day I get to unpack those bags, not in my hometown, but in a place, I can finally call MY HOME.

WHAT IF I RUN AWAY

My mind is a maze

where fear hangs photos of every time I've failed frames them in whispers, labels them **proof.****

It tells me:

don't speak too loud,
don't dream too big,
don't love like that again.

But my heart

my heart is unruly,
a wildfire wrapped in jasmine,
full of love too loud to hide,
and passion that refuses to sleep.

She writes poems in the dark,
sings when no one listens,
falls in love with everything that makes her feel alive.

And I am caught between the trembling and the trust, between the scars in my thoughts and the stars in my chest.

But maybe that's what courage is:
not the absence of fear,
but dancing anyway
with shaky legs and open arms.

So what if I carry both?

The doubt in my head and the fire in my ribs?

What if I run anyway?

What if I burn through the silence and let the love be louder?

Editor's Note

As we bring the inaugural edition of The Litera Chronicle to a close, we take a moment to appreciate the collective effort that made this beginning possible. Every article, idea, and contribution reflects the enthusiasm and creativity of individuals who believe in the power of expression and shared thought.

This newsletter marks the first step toward building a vibrant literary community where voices can be heard, ideas can be explored, and perspectives can be celebrated. We are deeply grateful to everyone who contributed their time and effort to shape this edition.

We hope that through these pages, readers find inspiration, insight, and a renewed appreciation for the written word. Thank you for being a part of the beginning of this journey with us.
